

ST. ANDREW'S

DAY

On 30th November in Poland is the day of mysterious parties with the candles and future telling games, called Andrzejki (St. Andrew's Day)

Like with all Polish celebrations, there is a feast, and it works exactly the same as any other feast in Poland: there is loads of food and drinks.

The most spectacular is pouring liquid wax into water. The shape formed by the wax from a candle is supposed to represent something that will happen to you in the upcoming year. For instance, if you see something resembling a car – you can expect that you will get one.

The shoes competition is reserved for the girls only. All of them took off their left shoes and put them in a line one after the other. Then this line of shoes “walk” to the door, the last moving to the front on by one, thus walking forward. The girl who’s shoe reach the door first, would be the first to get married.

Students at our school celebrate St. Andrew's day too. There are divinations, sweet refreshments and of course a good fun.
